OUR VISION

We are creating a vibrant new community in keeping with Didcot's Garden Town status by holistically blending inspirational architecture with specially selected landscaping and a beautiful new neighbourhood park.

Willowbrook Park is a unique environment that mixes the traditional with the contemporary. This is achieved by connecting modern living with the local natural surroundings to create beautiful, award winning homes and carefully designed character areas that bring the rural into the residential to promote greener living and inspire active lifestyles.

The new neighbourhood park will provide a multifunctional urban oasis within easy reach of all the modern conveniences of a Croudace home. A turfed central 'kickabout area' is to include space for sports and other activities while designated areas sown with a mix of grass seed and wildflowers will create meadows and encourage pollinating insects including bees, butterflies and moths. The site will be bordered with mature planting and strategically placed swales that will have additional habitation for other wildlife. Nocturnal fauna is supported with bat and bird boxes positioned in trees and minimal lighting throughout the park. Multiple access points, a picnic area, benches and a proposed play area will ensure the neighbourhood park will be enjoyed by residents and visitors alike.

As part of the Northeast Didcot development masterplan, proposals have been submitted for a brand new neighbourhood centre on land adjoining Willowbrook Park. There are plans to provide community services, retail units and hotel accommodation and licenses agreed for a gastropub or restaurant. Potential sites have been identified for a new primary school, a nursery, a care home and a community centre, as well as a sports centre and playing fields nearby.

GARDEN TOWN

The Town and Country Planning Association (TCPA) consider a garden town or city to be a 'holistically planned new settlement which enhances the natural environment, tackles climate change and provides high quality housing and locally accessible jobs in beautiful, healthy and sociable communities'.

Ladygrove Park and Playground

Didcot was the first existing town to be declared a 'Garden Town' when it was awarded the status in 2015. In keeping with the requirements Garden Town status affords, Willowbrook Park will balance the natural environment with energy efficient new homes and carefully planned communal areas, including green corridors, cycle routes and footpaths and the beautifully curated neighbourhood park.

The idea of garden cities was first introduced by British urban planner Ebenezer Howard in his book Garden Cities of To-morrow (1898) which described a utopian city that harmoniously blended nature with urban landscapes. This started the Garden City Movement, which proposed this new idea as an alternative to cramped, over-crowded industrial cities that could also solve the issue of rural depopulation. The movement led to the creation of the first two Garden Cities, Letchworth and Welwyn in Hertfordshire. The development of 'New Towns' including Stevenage and Milton Keynes in the years following the Second World War also took influence from the Garden City Movement.

Howard's original Garden City concept image, produced in 1902, also serves as inspiration for the design of Willowbrook Park's beautiful neighbourhood park, in tribute to his vision.

"Howard's Garden City concept image inspired the design of the new open spaces, with his vision reflected in the balance of rural and urban aspects within the scheme and a strong emphasis on preserving and enhancing existing green edges across the site."

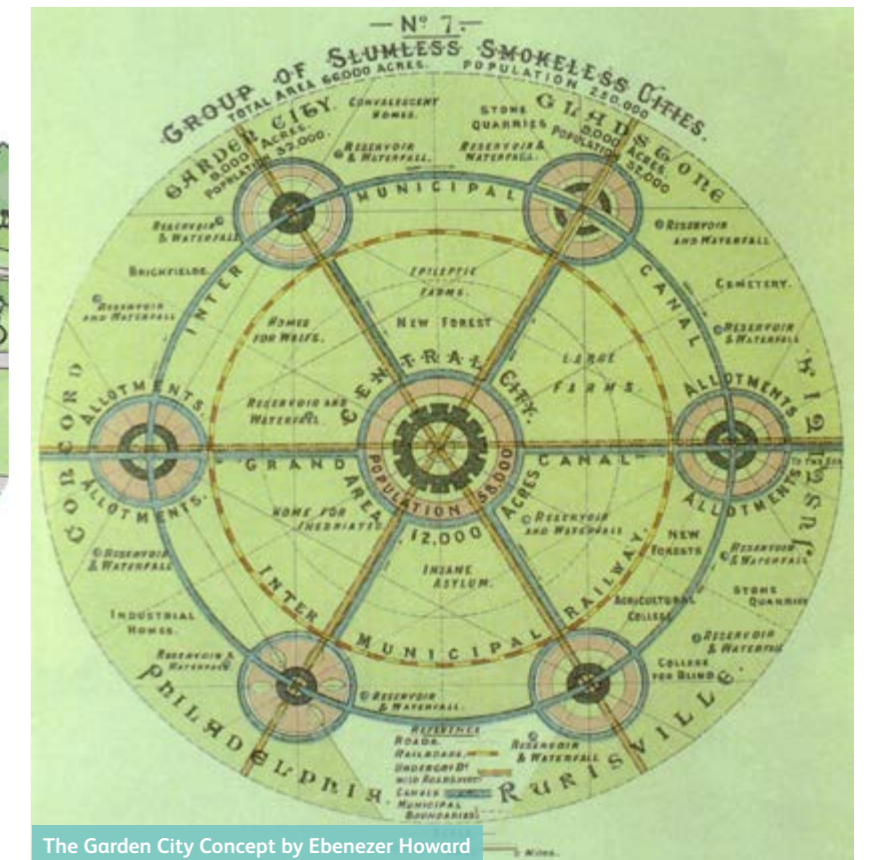

Magdalena Daleczko, Landscape Architect

"The Garden City philosophy is at the heart of the design of Willowbrook Park, from the materials and detail of the buildings, to the layout of the interlinking green corridors, with forms reflecting those found in the villages surrounding Didcot."

Balcony Design

An expertly designed, tree-lined avenue will link each phase to the neighbourhood park, bringing the Garden Town philosophy to all residential areas within Willowbrook Park. Lush green corridors will include cycle routes and footpaths that interlink with existing public rights of way, providing residents with alternative routes to neighbouring villages, the town centre and the Science Vale UK Enterprise Zone campuses in nearby villages.

Every aspect of Willowbrook Park has been designed to be respectful of existing countryside and retain the character of the area. Architectural detailing, such as splayed bay windows, double brick arches, black timber boarding, render and tile-hanging features all provide architectural interest and variety throughout the development. This is combined with the elegantly designed communal areas and the enhanced green corridors to seamlessly link Willowbrook Park with the surrounding landscape. Above are some illustrative sketches of our proposed design.

HISTORY AND ENTERPRISE

Didcot has been inhabited for over 9000 years. Archaeological finds show evidence of settlement dating back to the Mesolithic, Neolithic, Iron and Bronze Ages.

The origin of the name is Old English, meaning 'house or shelter of Dudda's people', derived from the name of a local sub-king, Dida of Eynsham, who ruled an area of Mercia near Oxford in the Seventh Century.

Didcot has been an important regional rail hub since the decision was made to branch off a line of the Great Western Railway (engineered by Isambard Kingdom Brunel) from Oxford. The first train line through the town was completed in 1839 and Didcot Station was opened as a junction station on the Great Western Main Line in 1844. Today, the town is home to Didcot Railway Centre, a museum and engineering preservation site located in a former engine shed and locomotive stabling point.

Didcot is the gateway to the largest 'scientific cluster' in the UK and is part of the Science Vale UK Enterprise Zone. A number of important scientific, research and development and high technology campuses are based in nearby villages, including Milton Park, the Culham Science Centre and the Harwell Science and Innovation Campus, making Science Vale UK one of the largest communities of its kind in Europe.
